

Case Study: LASALLE College of the Arts, Singapore

Client: LASALLE Foundation Limited

Project

The New City Campus for the LASALLE College of the Arts comprises a 6-storey iconic institutional building with 2 basements and a construction floor area of 53,000 m². The proposed new city campus of this leading international arts college has modern state-of-the-art teaching, performing, theatre and exhibition facilities. The project was subject of a design competition and it was displayed at the Venice Biennale exhibition (La Biennale di Venezia) in year 2004.

Our role

Rider Levett Bucknall Singapore was appointed as the Project Manager for the development from the early inception of the project. Our role covers development management, project administration and management of the professional disciplines, authority liaison, programme and budgetary control and implementation.

Client benefits

Our Client has enjoyed a total and integrated project development service that has taken on board issues ranging from design development, funding arrangements, main and specialist procurement arrangements, to allied and integral direct contact inputs that are no less central to the effective and efficient operation of the completed campus. The evolving status of the institution from a College to full University status mirrors the development of the project.
